PREFACE

The economic prosperity of a nation may be judged from the proportion of people owning durable consumer goods / luxuries, such as car / scooter, television and the proportion of people availing banking services. There is no doubt that access to banking services depends to a large extent on the banking system. A good network of banks with wide spread coverage, covering both urban and rural areas, goes a long way in facilitating trade and commerce and increasing savings in the economy, there by gearing up economic growth. The data relating to ownership of cars and the people who avail the services of banks also in some measure reflect the quality of life of people and may be used to derive the incidence of poverty. One of the major issues in estimating the magnitude of poverty in a developing country arises on account of the fact that generally people do not disclose their actual income and many people wish to keep their actual income a closely guarded secret. Under such circumstances, it is always desirable to gauge the economic status of a person by identifying the durable consumer goods / luxuries he/she owns and whether he/she is utilising services rendered by banks.

How many households in the cities of India utilize banking services and how many have various assets such as television, car scooter etc? To respond to these and related issues, the instant document has been brought out. The analysis carried out in the document is based on the data of Census of India, 2001, which, inter alia, gives city wise number of households availing banking services and the number of households having assets such as car, scooter, and television and so forth. The census data does not include institutional households.

I would like to place on record the dedicated efforts of Shri J. Nagarajan, Senior Social Scientist and the exemplary assistance provided to him by his team of officers consisting of Shri B.K. Bharti, Senior Research Officer, Shri P.P. Tuteja and Shri T. Tete for bringing out this report.

I am sure administrators, policy-makers, planners and researchers engaged in the field of urban development will find this report useful in variety of ways.

Concepts and Definitions

1. Urban Areas

In the Census of India 2001, the definition of urban area adopted was as follows:

- a. All places with a municipality, corporation, cantonment board or notified town area committee, etc.
- b. A place satisfying the following three criteria simultaneously:
 - i. a minimum population of 5,000;
 - ii. at least 75 per cent of male working population engaged in non-agricultural pursuits; and
 - iii. a density of population of at least 400 per sq. km. (1,000 per sq. mile).

For identification of places which would qualify to be classified as 'urban' all villages, which, as per the 1991 Census had a population of 4,000 and above, a population density of 400 persons per sq. km. and having at least 75 per cent of male working population engaged in non-agricultural activity were considered.

2. City

Towns with population of 1, 00,000 and above are called cities.

3. Household

A 'household' is usually a group of persons who normally live together and take their meals from a common kitchen unless the exigencies of work prevent any of them from doing so. Persons in a household may be related or unrelated or a mix of both. However, if a group of unrelated persons live in a census house but do not take their meals from the common kitchen, then they are not constituent of a common household. Each such person was to be treated as a separate household. The important link in finding out whether it was a household or not was a common kitchen. There may be one member households, two member households or multi-member households.

4. Institutional Household

A group of unrelated persons who live in an institution and take their meals from a common kitchen is called an Institutional Household. Examples of Institutional Households are boarding houses, messes, hostels, hotels, rescue homes, jails, ashrams, orphanages, etc. This category of households covers only those households where a group of unrelated persons live in an institution and share a common kitchen.

5. Availing Banking Services

The household was considered availing banking services if its head and / or any other member in the household was availing banking services provided by the bank or post office bank as a holder of any type of bank account. This covers all types of commercial banks such as nationalised banks, private banks, foreign banks and the co-operative banks.

The credit and thrift societies did not form part of the banking system and as such these services were not covered under banking services.

6. Availability of Asset

The availability of following assets in the household was ascertained and the particular item, if available in the household, 'Yes' was entered and if not available, 'No' was recorded:

1. Radio / Transistor
2. Television
3. Telephone
4. Bicycle
5. Scooter / Motor Cycle / Moped
6. Car / Jeep / Van

The enquiry was limited to their availability and not their number. The above assets were treated as available only if these were in reasonable working order.

Regarding availability of telephone, the concern of the enquiry was limited to its availability and not the source. Therefore, if the telephone was provided to any member of the user household by the government, corporate office, company, etc., this was treated as available. This facility was also considered available if the household was using a cellular mobile telephone

A car or a jeep or a van was treated as available to the household if this was put to use by the members of the household for their own use.

Annexure

Number of Households Availing Banking Services and Number of Households Having Specified Asset in Cities of India - 2001
